The Maralinga Test Site and Its History

In the 1950s and 1960s, the British government, in collaboration with Australia, conducted a series of nuclear tests at Maralinga, a remote area in South Australia. These tests were part of Cold War-era military research, intended to develop nuclear weapons. However, these tests had devastating environmental and social repercussions, particularly for the traditional Anangu people, the indigenous custodians of the land.

The area was evacuated of its original inhabitants, and the land was contaminated with radioactive materials. The aftermath of these tests left a legacy of health issues, environmental destruction, and cultural trauma, which continue to affect the Anangu community today.

The Impact on the Anangu People

The Anangu, who have inhabited the land for tens of thousands of years, experienced profound dislocation and loss.
